

Lectureships “Bridges in Europe” – Call for Applications!

About EPICUR:

EPICUR (The European Partnership for an Innovative Campus Unifying Regions) aims to pioneer innovative ways of cooperation and collaboration among its member universities, offering diverse mobility and exchange opportunities. At the core of EPICUR are student-centered learning approaches and collaborative teaching formats, along with various mobility options, including physical, virtual, or blended experiences. EPICUR consists of nine universities distributed all over Europe.

Bridges in Europe – Lectureships

"Bridges in Europe" seeks to offer lectures and talks on current topics with speakers from science and politics and aims to foster engaging discussions and intellectual exchange on pivotal themes shaping the future of Europe. The content of the lectures and presentations should deal with current and relevant "European topics". Possible topics could entail: Europe and Migration (delve into the complexities and challenges surrounding migration in Europe, exploring strategies for fostering inclusivity and cooperation), or Bridging Specialists and Societies (examine the dynamics between academic experts and the broader public within European universities, evaluating the methods and successes of effective knowledge dissemination).

Are you interested in shaping the European higher education and gaining international teaching experience? Maybe even co-teach with an EPICUR colleague? Then the "Bridges in Europe" lectureships are for you!

We offer small lectureships (1-3 ECTS) or respective compensation for talks.
